Elizabeth: There is usually some internal cause for an unpleasant breath, and one must get rid of the internal trouble before it can be remedied. Indigestion sometimes is the cause, also the condition of the teeth. Here is a formula for a mouth wash which will help you, but only give temporary relief until the cause is found and cured. One gram piente acid, twenty-five grains boric acid, thirty drops thymol or menthol, ten grams tincture of anise, and three pints of water. Mix and rinse the mouth with this wash, which should be diluted for ure in the proportion of one-half tooth wash to same quantity of clear water. Use after each meal and at any time required.

All of this is to be added to that other exercine, which you should keep up regularly, of rising on the balls of the feet and lowering the body down to the feet and lowering the body down to the floor and up again while balancing on the balls of the feet.

I realize that people living in apartment houses are not apt to use the stair exercise, as they always use an elevator, and hardly know where the stair are situated, but it would well repay them to hunt up a stairway and use it for their benefit, if they want to feel that they are not "growing old."

Remember, age is not in the knee joints, but in the treatment of them.

The Trey O'Hearts

Romantic Tale by Louis Joseph Vanco new-ight. 1914. by Louis Joseph Vance

SYNOPSIS.

By errangemen' with the Universal Film Manufacturing Campany, it is possible to read "The Tray O' Hearts" in The Timestread The American Polyagach at also to see it in pictures at the Superior Theatro. Pynopsis of preceding chapters: The trey of hearts is the death sign used by Seneca Trine in the private wan of vengeance, which, through the agency of his daughter Judith, a woman of violent passions like his own, he wages against Alan Law, ton of the man (now sead) who was immocratly responsible for the accident which left Trine a heipless cripple for life Alan loves and is loved by Rose, Judith's twin and double, but in gli other respects her opposite. Judith vows to compass Alan's death, but Alan saves her life under dramatic circumstances, and so unwillingly, wing her love. Thereafter Judith is actuated in turn by the old hatred, the newlovs, and jealousy of her sister Rose; she becomes allenated from her father through her failure to carry out his homicidal plans, and because of the aid sahe has extended Aran in his flight with Rose from the vengence of Trine through the mountains of Western Arisona. Alan, Rose, Barcus and Judith are pursued relentlessip by Trine's agents, two of whom Alan is forced to kill in self-defense. While Alan is asseep, Judith Risses him and is detected by Rose.

With a passionate gesture Judith tore open the bosom of her waist, offering her flesh to the muzzle of the revolver,

A cry broke from the lips of Rose that was like the cry of a foriorn child punished with crueity that passes its anderstanding. She fell back against the wait. The revolver swept up through the air—but its mark was her own head rather than Judith's bosom.

But before her finger found strength to pull the trigger the man at the table, startled from his sleep by the some of angry voices, seaped from his some of angry voices, seaped from his chair with a violence that sent it cust-tering to the floor, and hurled himself neading across the room, imprisoning the wrist of his betrothed with one hand while the other wrested the weapon away and passed it to Judith.

"Rose!" he cried thickly, "what does this mean? Are you mad? Judith—"
Dragging the bosom of her waist together, Judith thrust the weapon into its hoister and turned away. "Be kind to her, Alan," she said in Semehow, blindly, she stumbled out of the cabin into the open, possessed by a thought whose temptation was stronger than her powers of resistance. What Rose had failed to accompilsh might now serve to resolve Judith's problem. . . None, she told herself, bitterly, would seek to hinder her. But she meant so to arrange the matter that none should see or suspect and be moved to interfere.
